

From The President

I confess. I like to fly-fish. And sometimes that means I end up in the middle of a rushing stream trying to get to that perfect spot where I just know trout are lined up waiting for the fly that I've carefully chosen. Unfortunately, a couple of times in my quest for trout I've taken the equivalent of an ice bath in those streams. Not a pretty picture.

Wading across a rushing river can be pretty disorienting. The force of the water creates pressure on your legs that you're not used to. And when a rock shifts under your foot that pressure gets you off balance pretty quickly. Once you've lost your balance it's really hard to regain it. Trust me. I know. That's why I bought a wading staff recently. It provides another point of balance to help keep me on my feet when the water is trying to push me over.

What's your wading stick in ministry? What do you grab hold of when it feels like you're about to lose your balance and get pushed in a direction you didn't intend to go? I've thought about that question a lot in recent days. I suspect that our answer to it says more about what we value than perhaps we're willing to admit. Even more it exposes what we really believe our mission to be.

It's been interesting to observe the hue and cry from many evangelicals in the aftermath of the Supreme Court decision legalizing gay marriage. I get the feeling that many of them feel threatened by the decision. It's as if they've been knocked off balance by the cultural force of support for gay marriage and the inevitable decision by the court this past summer. So they've reached instinctively for their wading stick to find equilibrium and stay on their feet. For some that wading stick has been a battle cry of defiance against the forces of cultural decay and the erosion of religious liberty. For others it's been a reaffirmation of the centrality of the gospel of grace and our need to make that gospel the centerpiece of our ministries and public presence.

Hard times force us to ask hard questions. Hard questions force us to examine those deep places of conviction and values. What's your wading stick?

RECLAIM: an exploration of orientation, disorientation and reorientation

The current exhibition at the Bridge Gallery investigates the interwoven themes of orientation, disorientation, and reorientation. What happens to wasted lives, discarded values, and forgotten histories? If reclamation is the central narrative of history, as Christians claim, how does time move from its initial orientation to the all too common, too human, disorientation, and then into a radically new reorientation of all things?

RECLAIM raids this question by charting particular points along the way toward reorientation. Not every piece resolves the question, but taken collectively, the exhibition examines reality with symbols of faith and the story of wholeness.

The Bridge Gallery will host an open house on October 27, which will include dialogue with the artists, refreshments, and a short lecture. Click here for more details.

Lee Lee Dart, MA Christian Formation/Soul Care, 2011

Lee Lee Dart is RMC's (Rocky Mountain Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists) very first woman pastor to serve at The Adventure Church in Greeley. Lee Lee's relationship with the Greeley congregation goes back to nearly four years when she was employed as a part-time ministry leader in the position of director of worship. She has faithfully served in that capacity by helping to plan creative, contemporary and most of all, Spirit-led worship services.

Sarah Marsh, MA Christian Formation/Soul Care, 2015

Sarah is now working towards her Certificate in Chaplaincy and shares a note written to Howard Baker, Assistant Professor of Christian Formation.

Hi Howard,

I just wanted to send you a quick email to say thank you. I feel so equipped!! I was nervous about walking into the world of chaplaincy without having an MDiv or at least an MA in Chaplaincy. That anxiousness has been laid aside as I am seeing I am well equipped to offer pastoral care and soul care to the patients, families and staff I see because of what we learned in our program.

What I love as well is the little tidbits of Catholic information we picked up along the way. Working for a Catholic hospital, this has come in handy! I have been able to offer pastoral care across denominational borders.

Also, I am on staff at Cherry Creek Presbyterian Church as the Women's Ministry Coordinator. This is just an amazing opportunity to offer spiritual direction and soul care to women in the church setting. Again, I feel so equipped!!!

I am just so grateful for the personal healing that took place through this program as well as what I learned that can be applied to my career.

The way God is working in my life is better than I could have ever imagined or dreamed.

Shalom,
Sarah

Fran Sciacca, MA Systematic Theology, 1980

Fran announces the release of his latest book So, What's Your Point? which was independently published by Hands of Hur ministry and has been picked up by NavPress in alliance with Tyndale. Look for Professor of New Testament Bill Klein's comments on the list of endorsements.
